C&C Logial 46 Power Cat

WALK THROUGH

The C&C Logial is very imposing when viewed for the first time, whose gleaming, new, white Anel-Grip paint can probably be seen from the Space Station. Unlike the ordinary Yacht, space abounds on this vessel.

Upon stepping aboard her port quarter one notices that nothing moves, the stepping onto a concrete dock. However, she can be pushed and moved around with little effort. Here at the stern one is met with an expansive cockpit area with plenty of seating and plenty of room for a dining table. This area is completely shaded by a fiberglass awning for protection from the sun and rain.

Stepping to the outside and headed forward along the very wide port side-deck are stainless rails and lifelines running to the bow. Here on the bow is the centerline located ground tackle consisting of a 70M pile type anchor with 120' B&B Chain rode and a large Loftness Anchor Windlass. Five Bomec hatches line the foredeck ahead of the bow with ample storage.

Stepping up the new stairs is a very large Flybridge area, limited only by one's imagination as to how to use this great space. Here is her helm station and backdeck aft with four 100 watt solar panels mounted atop. A new awning covers the helm with all rails and stainless canvas. In this area being one.

Headed down and back to the expansive cockpit where there is plenty of storage and generator up access. This Area is a delightful area with seating across the rear.

Stepping aboard through newly finished French doors one enters the Living Room aboard Salina. Her full sized furniture is here with the ability to rearrange things when the mood hits. This is a bright and pleasant space dedicated solely to great air conditioned living with the electrical panel being close at hand. From this great Salina its down stairs at each or the four corners acting as the hub to these spaces.

The Galley is so Starboard and runs from amidships aft in this hull. The galley is well equipped and access to the starboard main engine is here hidden away.

Back up and forward and down are two Master Staterooms, port half and starboard half. These masters are very large, each with its own en suite bathroom. These Staterooms have ingeniously used space in the forward hulls coming in the centerline of the vessel for each Stateroom.

Back up and down in the port quarter is another stateroom and head. Access to the port main engine can be made here hidden away through the head.

BROKER'S IMPRESSIONS

"Arcadia" would be an outstanding live aboard, giving the space needed to live comfortably. With the space available to allow ones imagination to take hold as to what they would do with this space or that space. Most Yachts on the market have built-in that do not offer the flexibility that "Arcadia" offers.

Theresebus resource was spent on this vessel and it is in my opinion that "Arcadia" is an outstanding opportunity at her current asking price.
